

The International Press Corps Application

International Press Corps Application

Dear Applicants,

We are looking for creative thinkers and experienced, articulate writers to be delegates in the International Press Corps at CMUN 2024. The committee will involve a mix of writing and crisis-based debate revolving around international affairs and the fascinating institution that is the media. If you think you have what it takes, fill in this application and send it to us at ipc.cmun2024@gmail.com by 18th July, 2024 11:59 pm. All the best!

Name:

Grade:

School:

Email address:

Question 1

Why are you interested in being a delegate in the International Press Corps this year, and what differentiates you from other applicants? If applicable, also tell us about your previous experiences in Model United Nations, debating, writing and journalism. (Max: 200 words)

Question 2

On the 14th of January, 2011, Tunisian President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali fled the country following intense public protests, marking the first major success of the Arab Spring. Write an opinion piece from either the perspective of The Guardian or Al Jazeera about this landmark event. The piece should use historical evidence and rhetoric to assess this event's implications for the spread of democratic movements across the Arab world and the potential challenges ahead. (Max: 500 words) (Expository Piece)

Question 3

Transcribe an interview with any current world leader about a global issue or topic that interests you and is relevant to their nation. Your questions should be hard-hitting and engaging, bringing a unique perspective to the issue at hand. This question is to gauge your creativity and your eye for what is newsworthy, thus the answers can deviate from the actual events, as long as they are plausible. (Max: 500 words)

Question 4

Give us witty captions for the following pictures:

