

Award Criteria

Cathedral Model United Nations, 2026

Delegation Awards

CMUN 2026 will have 3 Delegation Awards, which are as follows:

1. One Best Delegation Award
2. Two Outstanding Delegation Awards

To be eligible for an award, a delegation must comprise at least 8 delegates.

Awards are calculated based on the ratio of individual awards to the total strength of the delegation.

CMUN 2026 allows two delegations per school to participate.

In such a case, delegation awards are independent of each other. Awards from the International Press Corps will not be considered when calculating Delegation Awards. In the event of a tie, precedence will be given to the delegation with the most Best Delegate awards. In the event of equal number of Best Delegate awards, Outstanding Delegate awards will serve as a tie-breaker. If any conflict arises in this matter, the decision of the CMUN Coordinators will be final and binding.

Delegate Awards

Awards are given to delegates on the basis of their performance over the three days of the conference. The respective committee Directors make decisions on awards after consultation with the committee staff and the Secretary-General. We at CMUN take a holistic approach towards awards, and while there is no set formula, they are generally given to candidates who have performed well in all aspects of Model UN, primarily speaking, lobbying and paperwork. In double-delegate committees, awards are given on a delegation basis and not to individual delegates. Along with the criteria mentioned above, teamwork and equality among co-delegates in terms of skill and proficiency are important factors. If a conflict arises regarding awards, the decision of the Secretary General will be conclusive.

The awards will be as follows:

Important Details to Note:

1. The award distribution listed above represents the tentative number of awards available in each committee. However, it may be subject to change at the Executive Board's discretion. The Directors will evaluate their committee's performance and progress, while also factoring in individual performance when determining the number of awards to present. With respect to matters of this nature, the Secretary-General's decision is final and binding.
2. In addition to the aforementioned awards, the Executive Board of each committee is at liberty to award any number of Diplomatic Commendations, at their discretion, to delegates who have exemplified the diplomatic and collaborative spirit of CMUN.
3. All awards will be presented on the final day of the conference (10th August 2026) in the form of physical certificates.
4. The allocation policy for CMUN 2026 is that at least one member of every delegation will be assigned a role in the General Assembly.
