

The International Press Corps Application

International Press Corps Application

Dear Applicants,

We are looking for creative thinkers and experienced, articulate writers to be delegates in the International Press Corps at CMUN 2025. The committee will involve a mix of writing and crisis-based debate revolving around international affairs and the fascinating institution that is the media. If you think you have what it takes, fill in this application and send it to us at ipc.cmun2025@gmail.com by the 1st of July, 2025 11:59 pm. All the best!

Name:

Grade:

School:

Email address:

Question 1

Why are you interested in being a delegate in the International Press Corps this year, and what differentiates you from other applicants? If applicable, also tell us about your previous experiences in Model United Nations, debating, writing and journalism. (Max: 200 words)

Question 2

On February 16, 2024, Russian opposition leader Alexei Navalny died in a Siberian prison, prompting global outrage, protests, and renewed questions about authoritarian resilience. Write an opinion piece from the perspective of The Washington Post, examining this event's implications for democracy, state control, and the future of dissent—both in Russia and globally. (Max: 500 words) (Opinion Piece)

Question 3

Transcribe a fictional but realistic interview with any current world leader (e.g., Donald Trump, Narendra Modi, Justin Trudeau, Lula da Silva, or even Volodymyr Zelenskyy) on a global issue you care about, be it climate negotiations, digital surveillance, immigration, or energy security. Ask tough, creative, and thoughtful questions. Feel free to imagine how they respond. (Max: 500 words)

Question 4

Give us witty captions for the following pictures:

